

Saxon Students Depict 'Bill of Rights Week'

A video tape film featuring members of a North High School government class was produced by students of the school's television production class during national Bill of Rights Week. "Our First Ten Commandments, the Bill of Rights" is the title of the educational film featuring students in W. J. Bergh's class. Highlighting the film are personal interpretations of each of the amendments by several North High seniors. Special narration is furnished by Mark Hubert and Janice Rouen. Contents of the Bill of Rights are discussed by a panel of five seniors: Steve Young, Lisa Miyama, Brad Hubbard, Mary Williams, and Johanna Drege. The film is one in a series of educational tapes of classroom viewing, written and produced by students under the Visual Horizons to Learning series. Assisting students in the production are Louis Bereskin, director, and W. Field, technical advisor.
